RUBENS ADDS COMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR

Veteran New Hampshire media personality adds strong voice to a strong team

Jim Rubens, candidate for U.S. Senate, is proud to announce its newest addition to a strong and growing team to bring meaningful change to Washington by adding veteran media personality Brian Tilton as Communications Director.

Announcing the latest addition, Rubens says, "With 18 years in the media business, Brian knows what New Hampshire voters expect of their elected officials. Brian has been on the ground for several years fighting for New Hampshire families, businesses and Constitutional rights. With his record of accomplishment, passion and involvement in the community, I have an even stronger team to help me defeat Jeanne Shaheen."

In his acceptance of the position, Tilton states: "I'm very happy to join Jim's fight to be part of the solution. For too long, Jeanne Shaheen has been part of the problem that many New Hampshire families struggle with on a daily basis. Jim has an accomplished record of public service to the people of New Hampshire. Jim is well known for building strong coalitions. For 40 years, he has made a difference in people's lives by leading the fight for more economic and personal freedom and I'm proud to be part of his team. Jim is the only candidate for Senate offering bold solutions."

Rubens adds, "Our campaign is one of ideas and broad support that continues to grow each day. Just defeating Jeanne Shaheen is not enough. As Republicans, we need to offer a real alternative, one of ideas and solutions. Voters recognize that I have what it takes to improve the lives of Granite Staters by ending business as usual in Washington."

For the past 5 1/2 years, Tilton hosted the popular radio talk show "Bulldog Live!" on WTPL 107.7FM "The Pulse" in Concord focusing on a wide variety of local and national issues. He was a driving force in the statewide debate on the LLC Income Tax, Northern Pass and 2nd Amendment issues covering every corner of the state. Prior to moving to New Hampshire in 2006, Tilton produced Maryland's highest-rated talk show at WBAL Radio in Baltimore, "The Ron Smith Show", where he was part of a team that earned one of the most prestigious awards in the industry, the National Headliner Award for investigative journalism. Tilton also worked as a news reporter and anchor in Connecticut. He resides in North Sutton with his wife and two children.

Tilton adds, "For the past 10 months, I've watched Jim Rubens build a strong coalition of supporters. I've seen Jim connect with voters who demand better and they deserve it. Without a doubt, Jim is the strongest candidate in this race and I look forward to helping him win so New Hampshire's hardest working citizens can once again be prosperous."
